

WAY AHEAD

"...every conviction begins as a whim" Heywood Brown

To call this offer eclectic would be rather an understatement as we have included wines from virtually all of the wine growing continents of the world.

It may be difficult initially to envisage any thread of a link between these very individual estates but what they all have in common is the pioneering spirit and brave, oft-times reckless, flights of the imagination which brought them into being.

These producers share a common philosophy whereby the vineyard and the quality of the harvest is of fundamental importance. This stands in marked contrast to many who see the winemaking process as the most crucial element of wine production.

Due to this fidelity to terroir, the wines show tremendous individuality and real character, throwing the gauntlet down to the ubiquitous trend towards global homogeneity.

ALISON BUCHANAN

May 2002