Andrea Franchetti's 2014 Tenuta di Trinoro represents the vintner's definitive shift to a more elegant and focused style of winemaking. This wine was once celebrated for its super ripe aromas and sweet, jammy flavors. But this cool vintage hammers home a new approach that sees less bulk and density—something Franchetti has been enthusiastically embracing over the past five years or so. The results are stratospheric. The Tenuta di Trinoro property sees pretty high average temperatures in summer. The quality of fruit offers special grace and elegance in cool years like this. Among the many samples I have tasted across Tuscany from the 2014 vintage, Tenuta di Trinoro is a memorable wine and a landmark achievement.

Andrea Franchetti has created a timeless set of wines from his Tenuta di Trinoro estate. In addition to the wines you see reviewed here, I had the opportunity to re-taste the three fascinating single-vineyard expressions of Cabernet Franc that represent a new wave at Tenuta di Trinoro. These are the 2014 Campo di Camagi (95 points), 2014 Campo di Magnacosta (91 points) and the 2014 Campo di Tenaglia (93 points). I'd give the same scores to the wines today, but I would be more generous to the 2014 Campo di Tenaglia that has fleshed out thanks to that extra year in the bottle. That wine merits a solid score of 92 points. Because I reviewed these wines one year ago, I didn't want to create confusion by publishing a duplicate set of scores. If you missed my article (and video) last year, you can see it here:

2014 Tenuta di Trinoro • Le Cupole

Reviewed by 👤 Monica Larner	The gorgeous 2014 Le Cupole defies the difficulties of the vintage thanks to extreme fruit selection (executed over numerous individual harvests). Andrea Franchetti is a perfectionist when it comes to fruit selection. This Bordeaux-inspired Tuscan blend opens to dark concentration and a full bouquet that is redolent of dark fruit, spice and tobacco. The aromas are delivered in seamless fashion and with noteworthy intensity. Those are the qualities that ultimately distinguish this wine among the many choices you have from Tuscany today. One thing Tenuta di Trinoro always delivers is distinct personality.

2014 Tenuta di Trinoro • Palazzi

Reviewed by 👤 Monica Larner	The 2014 Palazzi is a delicious and succulent Merlot-based wine that wraps thickly over the palate and treads with a sure and steady pace. The bouquet is packed tight with luscious fruit, bold cherry, blackberry and sweet almond. This vintage delivers a surprisingly intense and vibrant expression of the grape. There is oak spice but it is integrated with an impressive level of expertise and finesse. This was a difficult vintage but you'd never know tasting this gorgeous wine.
